

Stacks of experience.

Here at Principal Resourcing we know that the key to our business is the recruitment and, more importantly retention of quality supply teachers and support staff. We fully understand and appreciate the contribution you make which is why we go one step further to ensure that you feel valued.

Our detailed interview process will establish what your requirements are, from one day to five days per week we will do our utmost to ensure we work on your behalf to obtain the assignments you want. Our experienced consultants have extensive knowledge on the local schools from behavioural policies to ethos, we will be happy to provide you with as much information as you need.

In addition we take your personal development very seriously, and as well as our own training courses regularly delivered by educational experts; we will provide you with information as to where you can build your skills set. We will also provide websites for up to the minute educational developments and resources.

Finally, we appreciate that being on supply can sometimes seem lonely, so we'll provide you with plenty of social occasions to meet other supply teachers as well as the Principal Resourcing team.
